Customer Reviews

When my daughter was called out of town just before the new litter of puppies was to be born, I went into a panic because she had taken charge of whelping our first litter of maltipoo puppies. She was the one who had done extensive research online and had read the pertinent sections in the veterinary handbooks in our home library. I had played the role of ignorant bystander, admiring and cuddling each new puppy as it was delivered - never dreaming I might some day be called upon to handle the whole procedure on my own. NOW, faced with just that eventuality, I started madly doing research all over the net and in our various handbooks. However, I was so panicky and there was so much information out there to absorb that I was more confused than anything else. I was even finding contradictory advice in my searches and didn't know how to determine whose advice would be best to follow. When it became obvious that birth was imminent (in the next few hours), I REALLY got scared and began a frantic search for a kindle book that would be short and authoritative enough to give me just the pertinent, direct informed advice I needed in a clear, well-organized manner that could be absorbed in the limited time I had left before whelping would begin. I cannot thank Myra Savant-harris for providing just what I needed in the nick of time! As a trained professional with a knack for putting the most necessary and pertinent information out in a clear, readable style that would inform as well as soothe a nervous ninny like me, she took me step by step through an understanding of the whole process that was absolutely invaluable. It was as if someone stepped in and took my hand and guided me through what had seemed like a terribly confusing process.
