This fascinating read is primarily the story of Dr. Dan Burisch, a microbiologist at the infamous Area 51. It's well-documented with a substantial number of quotes from credible individuals as well as a long list of suggested reading, some of which I've read in the past. In a nutshell, Burisch was abducted as a child, his intelligence enhanced to an IQ of 200 in preparation for his "mission" which entailed the eventual recruitment by the government agency that deals with these matters known as Majestic 12. I'm not going to recount any further details because it would definitely constitute a spoiler, even though this is nonfiction. I believe it's important to read this information in context as opposed to sensationalizing the "good parts." Much of what is revealed is mind-blowing, i.e., in that "you can't make this stuff up" realm that goes beyond what I've conceived as a science fiction writer. Much of it is vaguely familiar, however, as presented in various television shows and movies. People have been saying for years that the government is moving toward disclosure and supposedly Dr. Burisch is part of that goal. They've been testing the waters for years regarding how the general populace would react, knowing that if/when the government confirms the existence as well as our alliance with extraterrestrials that things will never be the same again. Yes, there have been leaks over the years, but this book suggests that the majority of them were part of the plan to gradually reveal the truth. Some want disclosure, others do not. I read years ago that John F. Kennedy was assassinated because he was ready to go with full disclosure while others did not agree.

Once a again, a UFO book that promises to deliver the real story, but then moves off into more of a New Age philosophy with many inconsistencies in their stories of alien lore. Books like this and the Pleidian Mission make huge claims that anyone with a little bit of a scientific background will easily have their BS meter go off. At least in this book, there are no claims that the earth is \hat{a} oetrillions \hat{a} of years old. The book starts off with a life history of child prodigy Dan Burisch and how he eventually came to work at Area 51. His girlfriend and eventual wife keeps stealing items from him because she may be a Majestic 12 spy, but he marries her anyway and mysteriously takes her name. He works a part time job as a bail bondsman, while getting a PhD, while working for the government, while doing his own research, etc. He must work 40 hours a day to do all of this. The book does get exciting when Dan talks to alien J-Rod who reveals things such as telepathy, time-travel, and that humans split up into 2 different gene pools in 2012; the Greys (like J-Rod) and the Nordics (Pleidians?). However, later it is said that the Greys and Nordics are time-travelers from distant solar systems. Then again, they are from different dimensions. Which is it??? Oh and the mythical 2012 that UFO theorists has passed without much fanfare. I accept that future alien technology would seem magical to us now, but I would think the future of humanity and other species would be technological rather than biological, as is the trend. For example, the future of telepathy would likely be an implant in the brain to speak to each-other without words and not some higher form of consciousness communication that humans are not ready for yet.
