How To Make A Silencer For A .45 (Silencers)

Synopsis

Because it does not produce a sonic "crack," the .45 is an ideal pistol for a silencer. Here is a nuts-and-bolts guide to making your own silencer for the Colt 1911 Government Model .45 and its clones. Includes construction details for all components, manufacturing tips that will save you time and effort, and plenty of clear illustrations. For academic study only.

Customer Reviews

It might have been really nice to have even a jackleg machinist do a few of them but this was more two strings and some window screen. Will it work yes but not for very long. A weekend at the range or out back shooting squirrels and go get your self a new one. I was hoping for a list of where to buy the parts to build up the ones for a FHN tactical 45 with a screw-on front barrel Not one bit about the screw on barrel bits though that should have been much more prominent.dray

The author states this right up front. He has no control over what the editors put in the ad-blub. He says the same thing in the book on making a can for the Mini-14. He says to do your learning on a .22, and to read his .22 "can-book" FIRST. This man's designs work just as he says that they do. If you are not a machinist and a welder, of course you can't follow the instructions in this book. It would help to be an accomplished gunsmith, too.

The review below from "A Customer" was written by an IMPERSONATOR. Under that name I have reviewed ONLY the titles Practical Firearm Suppressors and Military Grade Suppressors. I have not read this title and cannot comment on it. Judging by the way my good fake name was used to trash it however it must be pretty damn good.

when you read it you cant make anything until you buy the firs book of th same autor, really bad interesting book with lots of information
