Conflict Of Interest

Synopsis

A chance meetingâ After inheriting a bar from his estranged father, all Derek wants to do is hand it off to someone else. He only planned to stay in Pennsylvania for a few days, but fate has a funny way of butting its nose in where it doesnât belong, especially when it turns out to be a man with the bluest eyes heâs ever seen. Who needs love when theyâve got the job of their dreams? When Jakeâs gorgeous one-night stand turns out to be the owner of the bar heâs trying to secure for a client, he does a double-take. The last thing he needs after getting his heart stomped on by his ex is another relationship, especially at the cost of his job. But the more these two try to keep things professional, the stronger their temptation becomes. One more night. What harm could it do? Derekâs only in town until the end of the week. Is one more night together worth the risk? Or will Derek return home with a heavier heart than when he left?

Customer Reviews

I am becoming a huge fan of Miya Lee's writing. I've enjoyed all of her books so far. The writing improves with every book and I just adore her characters. I think Derek and Jake may be my favorite couple so far. Derek is in Pennsylvania because his estranged father has passed away, leaving him his bar. Derek's initial plan is to sell the bar to his father's widow then go back home to Arizona. While having a drink at a different bar, he meets Jake, who happens to work for the law firm that the father's widow is a client for. Jake knows the case but as the newbie in the firm, doesn't think he'd handle the case and doesn't know this is the same Derek anyways. So, they hit it off and wind up leaving together. This was just suppose to be a one night stand, Derek told Jake he's only in town for a week or so on business. But the attraction is more than physical. And they wouldn't mind getting to know each other a little better, even if it's only for the short time. So they make plans to meet up again the following night. Jake is surprised the next day when he's given the case, which is suppose to be a done deal. He goes to the bar to get the papers signed and is impressed with the changes that have already been made to the facility. Then he meets the owner...Derek. And therein lies the conflict of interest. This is a short read and up until the Epilogue, takes place within a matter of days. These guys are really drawn to each other from the start. They know they shouldn't be seeing each other because of their connection and the fact that Jake works at the firm representing the potential buyer. But Jake is impressed with the changes Derek has already made to the place and doesn't think Derek should sell to the the father's widow.
