Customer Reviews

Last year, I bought several books written by Honoree Corder ("Tall order", "Vision to reality", "The Successful Single Mom") and also the coaching podcasts. The last book I got is "The Successful Single Mom gets rich". I'm not going to comment each book separately because all the information I got has the same aim: self improvement for the single mom who is self employed. Since I tick those 2 boxes, I wanted to read everything I could and try to implement it. I'm halfway my "100 days". I still don't see any improvement in 2 of my 3 "measurable goals". Goal 1 was to loose weight. I found inspiration in "The Successful Single Mom gets fit". In just 50 days I went from potato coach to a much fitter version of myself. I made time to exercise and I walk everywhere. My body is firmer and more toned. My waist is slimmer. However I didn't loose any weight. Goal 2 was to have more money in the bank. I started a second job but was not able to save any money (I used the money from my second job to give my daughter a magnificent Christmas). My financial situation didn't improve. I got some small improvements in my third goal (decluttering my house). I have still 50 days to go before I can tell if it worked or not. But since I started the "100 days", I could see huge improvements in other areas of my life (who were not part of my 3 goals). I work more efficiently, lose less time, get better organized... (thanks to the coaching podcasts). Two small miracles happened and I see them as " collateral benefits" generated by all the changes I tried to implement.1) I got rid of my stalker. This was going on for nearly 6 years.
