"Tales Of Horror and Mayham As Told By Adam Cesare and Matt Serafini." "A Horror Fans Mustread"

Good job Adam and Matt! Loved the concept. Take the idea of Night Gallery or Tales From the Crypt but add your favorite (or possibly not so favorite) Creature Feature host! My favorites: Savior Girl in Philly Hell and The Last Remake. All of the stories were great, but those two stuck out to me. The added four stories at the end was a great touch and put the cherry on top of the sundae! The "intermissions" were fun. Loved it Guys!

I haven't read a single poor line by Adam Cesare, and I've just discovered the wonderful world of Matt Serafini. So, yeah, I'm a fan. Put these two together, and you have the most beautiful stew of cinematic anthology horror since Creepshow, and Trilogy of Terror. The book's simple linking mechanism of a late night horror host gone mad works well enough on its own, but these guys planted some of their best short work in between the link.Buy this now. I assure you that you will have fun.

'All-Night Terror' was originally published back in 2013. Recently, those fine chaps at Sinister Grin Press have re-released it with some kick-ass new cover art AND four NEW stories!The concept of 'All-Night Terror' is very cool. It is a series of short stories that pay homage to the video nasties from the 1980s. Part 'Tales from the Crypt' and part 'Twilight Zone' this book is everything the b-movie horror fan is looking for. There are tales about cryptids, action figures that come to life and much, much more. All of the stories are tied together by a common thread. A series of intermissions serve as another story in which a deranged employee has taken over his local television station creating havoc and panic.Adam Cesare and Matt Serafini wear their hearts on their sleeves. You can tell that these guys have a real connection to the horror genre and this particular time. There isn't in-depth character development, that isn't why you read books like this. You read books like this because you have fond memories of a time when gore ruled the screens, when Freddy Kruger was the most frightening thing ever and you stayed up way past your bedtime to watch 'Tales from the Crypt'. It's a book written with heart and passion, features some ripper stories and is a great way to kill a couple of hours or dive in and out of during coffee breaks.
